Keep Plessis open: Business owner

Murdock Garden Market owner Gertrude Boisjoli is worried about the kind of impact an impending 14-month closure of Plessis Road will have on her business. JOHN TOWNS/FOR METRO

'Short window' Underpass project would see street closed for 14 months

JOHN TOWNS
winnipeg@metronews.ca

A Winnipeg business owner is lauding the effort to keep traffic flowing on Plessis Road during construction of an underpass at the CNR Redditt line, just north of Dugald Road.

The project will see Plessis closed for more than a year, and see the almost 16,000 cars that use the route diverted to other routes.

Gertrude Boisjoli is concerned that if traffic is blocked when construction begins next month, she'll see a noticeable impact on her family business, Murdock Garden Market, just south of Dugald Road.

"We've got such a short window to sell our vegetables, and to lose August is a big deal," she said, noting that many of her customers may not be willing to make detours to get to her business.

Similar closures have had an up to 30 per cent decline in customers, Boisjoli said, which is why she's hopeful that the movement — called simply "Keep Plessis Open" — will gain traction and encourage the city to create a temporary road around the construction.

The movement is spearheaded by Elmwood MLA Jim Maloway, Transcona MLA Daryl Reid, and Raddison MLA Bidhu Jha, with the help of the Elmwood Transcona NDP Association.

Maloway, who previously ran a successful campaign that kept the Disraeli Freeway open during construction, said Tuesday the city has given a number of contradictory reasons why a temporary road can't be built, but suggested the main reason was to get the project completed by the civic election next October.

Transcona Coun. Russ Wyatt flat out rejected that implication, saying the construction relies on a federal Building Canada grant, which runs out in spring of 2015.

"Not only that, but we're told the road will be closed until well after the civic election anyway, closer to the end of 2014," he said, adding he's confident Transcona residents will adapt to the detours.

Slurpee-sippin' city and proud of it

In what should be a surprise to no one, Manitoba has yet again been named the Slurpee Capital of the World by convenience store giant 7-Eleven.

This is the 14th consecutive year that stores in our province have sold the most of the sugary frozen beverages per location.

To celebrate Manitobans' passion for the tasty treat, 7-Eleven has decided to launch the inaugural Slurpee Capital Trophy Cup Tour throughout Winnipeg on Thursday (the 11th day of the seventh month and 7-Eleven's honorary 44th birthday), which will see 7-Eleven mascot Mr. Slurpee and the 7-Eleven team join with everyday frozen-drink-loving Winnipeggers to hoist the Slurpee Cup.

The tour kicks off at 10 a.m. at 7-Eleven's Portage Avenue and Rouge location, and hits five stops before wrapping up.

7-Eleven will be feeding our Slurpee habit on Thursday as well — passing out 64,500 free 12oz Slurpees in Winnipeg alone to help beat the forecasted heat.

Move to the country, get tuition paid for Nurse practitioners.

Tuition grant part of provincial government's promise to hire 2,000 more nurses by 2015

SHANE GIBSON

shane.gibson@metronews.ca

The provincial government is hoping new tuition-covering grants will entice graduating nurse practitioners to work in rural communities.

The plan, announced Tuesday by Health Minister Theresa Oswald and Advanced Education and Literacy Minister Erin Selby, will see up to $10,000 in tuition costs covered for eligible nurse practitioners (NPs) who take jobs for at least one year in communities that have a hard time attracting medical professionals.

"There'll be chances for NPs to work on their craft in situations that are quite unlike an urban setting," said Oswald, who was quick to add the grants aren't intended to have NPs replace doctors in rural communities. "What we are learning is that when NPs and registered nurses and physicians can work in a collaborative model ... that's where Manitobans are going to get the best care."

Working in clinics, ERs, personal care homes and other facilities, NPs can diagnose illnesses, write prescriptions, and perform some of the same procedures traditionally done by doctors.

Applications for the new grants will be available in the fall.

Crime spree: Cops

Six teens charged in break-ins

Five 15-year-old youths and a 17-year-old are facing charges in connection to a spree of break-and-enters in Charleswood and St. James last weekend.

Police began investigating after a restaurant and a business, both in the 2300 block of Ness Avenue, were broken into in the early morning hours of July 5 and 7.

Between both break-ins just over $200 worth of merchandise was stolen, and windows were broken, police said, adding on July 8, around 12:30 a.m. a gas bar in the 3400 block of Roblin Boulevard was broken into and $300 in merchandise was stolen. Damage to a window was valued at $1,000. METRO

Minister who cried wolf. Lemieux sorry for 'howling coyotes' gibe

A Manitoba cabinet minister is apologizing for characterizing people who oppose the government's provincial sales tax increase as "howling coyotes."

Ron Lemieux, minister for local government, made the comment in the legislature last week. He said presenters at public hearings who support the tax increase weren't heard "over the din of the howling coyotes that we heard all night."

"Members opposite were there clapping to some of the comments that were made that were really disrespectful," Lemieux said last Thursday.

On Tuesday, he said he was referring to opposition MLAs when he made the coyote comment. But Lemieux conceded the legislative transcript does seem to suggest he was referring to people who were critical of the government.

"I was making my comments about the members of the opposition," Lemieux said in the legislature. "I should never have done that in the first place. We're trying to treat this as a respectful workplace and I should have never geared my comments to the members opposite."

"They certainly were not geared to the public that ... spent hot evenings presenting thoughtful presentations on both sides of the issue."

"If those individuals who came to present felt somehow that they were slighted by my comments, I regret that very, very much."

Public hearings were "hot and sweaty and sticky," but that didn't deter some from spending most of the evening waiting to have their say, Lemieux said.

"We really respected that."

About 130 people spoke out about the PST hike at hearings, which concluded on the weekend. The increase — to eight per cent from seven — has been collected since July 1, even though the bill regarding the sales tax hasn't been passed yet in the legislature.

As part of the budget bill, the NDP government is changing the law so it doesn't have to hold a referendum on the tax increase. The government has argued it needs the extra revenue to pay for improving infrastructure.

Pesticide suspected in honeybee deaths

Feeling the sting.

Experts to look at how to reduce risks of exposure

The international buzz about dead bees is prompting Ontario to seek help from a group of experts.

The provincial government is spearheading the formation of a bee-health working group to make recommendations on how to mitigate the potential risk of neonicotinoid pesticides to honeybees, the province said on Tuesday. Neonicotinoids are used on corn and soybeans.

A group of beekeepers, farmers, agribusiness representatives and scientists, as well as staff from federal and provincial agencies, will meet this month and provide recommendations by next spring, the government said.

Neonicotinoids have been banned by the European Union, which has been experiencing the same bee-mortality problem, Sierra Club Canada said in a release. "This working group is the first real recognition of the impact of neonicotinoid pesticides on bees," it said.

The Canadian Honey Council says the bee population in Canada has dropped by an estimated 35 per cent in the past three years.

Many fear the decline will have a severe impact on the pollination of plants and the Pollination is responsible for 70 per cent of cultivated plants, and for 35 per cent of humans' overall food consumption. Fewer bees means lower yields — especially of apples, strawberries and cucumbers — and could ultimately mean a drop in the food supply, scientists say.

global food supply.

But Health Canada's Pest Management Regulatory Agency has failed to act, Sierra Club Canada said.

The regulatory agency, which authorized neonicotinoid insecticides for commercial use in 2004, looked into the matter after bees' increased mortality was reported in 2012. It suggested that the bees died after exposure to insecticide-contaminated dust generated during the planting of treated corn seed.

A spokesman for the ministry said Health Canada is monitoring the situation closely and doesn't feel a broad suspension of the pesticide is warranted.

But the Ontario Beekeepers' Association said the province has experienced heavy losses of bee colonies this spring, which appear to be worse than last year.

"We must enact a ban before the next planting season," association president Dan Davidson said in a statement. "Our industry simply cannot sustain these losses."

Plane crash sparks new fears that tech is impairing pilots' skills

The crash landing of a South Korean airliner in San Francisco has revived concerns that airline pilots get so little opportunity to fly without the aid of sophisticated automation that their stick-and-rudder skills are eroding.

The U.S. National Transportation Safety Board, which is investigating the accident, is a long way from reaching a conclusion as to its probable cause. While the focus of their investigation could still shift, information released by the board thus far appears to point to pilot error.

What is known is that Asiana Airlines Flight 214 crashed short of its target runway Saturday at San Francisco International Airport in broad daylight under near-ideal weather conditions. The Boeing 777's engines are

Automation addiction

Automation has been a boon to aviation safety, providing a consistent precision that humans can't duplicate. But pilots and safety officials have expressed concern in recent years that pilots' "automation addiction" has eroded their flying skills to the point that they sometimes don't know how to recover from stalls and other problems.

- Dozens of accidents in which planes stalled in flight or got into unusual positions from which pilots were unable to recover have occurred in recent years.

- "If your last dozen landings were autopilot landings and here you are faced with nothing but visual (cues) to deal with, your rust factor would be greater," said Cass Howell, a former military pilot at Aeronautical University in Daytona Beach, Fla. "Too much automation can undermine your flying skills."

being examined, but they appear to have been receiving power normally. And the flight's pilots didn't report any mechanical issues or other problems.

The crash left two people dead and dozens more injured among the 307 aboard.

Betting on nature. Natural disasters cost worldwide insurers $13B in 6 months

Last month's flooding in central Europe caused more than $16 billion in damage, about a quarter of it insured — making it the year's costliest natural disaster so far, a leading insurance company said Tuesday.

Natural disasters worldwide cost the insurance industry a total of about $13 billion in the January to June period, while the overall cost of disasters was some $45 billion, Munich Re AG said in a regular review of disaster costs.

Both figures were well

Munich Re put insured losses from the flooding caused by the Elbe, Danube and several other rivers overflowing their banks at some $3.9 billion or more — most of them in Germany, but also in the Czech Republic, Austria, Slovakia and Hungary.

Flooding last month in Alberta caused damage initially estimated at more than $3 billion, with insured losses likely to top $1 billion.

Shedding light on forgotten Canadian war heroes

Operation Husky. Contribution helped turn the tide in WWII

JESSICA SMITH
Metro in Toronto

Charles Hunter says it "hurts a little" when his Second World War service is ignored.

Hunter, a bombardier with the 39 Regiment Royal Artillery, was one of 25,000 Canadian soldiers who invaded Sicily in 1943 as part of the Allied Operation Husky. It was the first independent role for Canadian soldiers in WWII, and Canada's strategic contribution helped open Italy to the Allies and turn the tide of the war.

Seventy years later, Operation Husky 2013 is commemorating the Battle of Sicily, which they say has been overlooked by history. The group says a poll of Canadians found 91 per cent didn't know Canadian troops were even in Sicily during WWII.

"I don't know why it's ignored," Hunter said. "And it kind of hurts a little bit, to feel you get ignored when you've done a good job — because we did, we did do a good job."

Operation Husky — the original one — commenced before the early hours of July 10, 1943.

Allied forces stormed the beaches at Pachino and climbed a 900-metre cliff the German's had left almost undefended, believing it impossible to scale.

The Allies drove the Germans off the island. Of 25,000 Canadians who fought, 562 had died by the end of the month. Compared to stories about D-Day, little is said about Canada's role in the Italian campaign.

To right that wrong, Operation Husky 2013 will be commemorating the Battle of Sicily beginning July 10. More than 200 Canadians are heading to Sicily to take part in remembrance ceremonies.

Lac-Mégantic home to burnt-out crime scene

Death toll still rising. Police tight-lipped on what they have found or are still looking for

The official death toll in the Quebec train disaster climbed to 15 on Tuesday, with two more bodies pulled from a scorched area police were calling a crime scene.

With about another 35 people still missing, residents of Lac-Mégantic expect the grim news to continue.

Provincial police said they had 200 officers on site performing a criminal investigation.

"There is potential evidence there that could eventually lead to criminal charges being laid," said Insp. Michel Forget.

"I won't speculate on the elements we have recovered because they will be secret."

He said he doesn't believe terrorism is at play.

Earlier on Tuesday, the national Transportation Safety Board said it is performing its own investigation.

The TSB said Tuesday that authorities were never alerted to the fact that a runaway train was on its way to levelling part of the small Quebec town.

Rail dispatchers had no chance to intervene during the fateful 18-minute journey because they didn't know it was happening, TSB investigator Donald Ross told reporters.

"There were no signals nor track circuits, so the rail-traffic controller had no ... indication that there had been a runaway train," he said.

Such systems are in place on busier rail lines but not on secondary lines, said TSB manager Ed Belkaloul.

Who abandons a Ferrari? A lawyer in a big hurry

There it was: a silver Ferrari, submerged in the murky floodwaters of Toronto.

Photos of the orphaned sports car were everywhere Monday night as the rains that pummelled Toronto subsided.

Howard A. Levitt, one of Canada's leading employment lawyers, was on his way to an important hearing in Ottawa. He entered an underpass following several other cars, each of which easily traversed a body of water that looked no deeper than a puddle.

No such luck for Levitt.

His 2010 Ferrari California, which retails for $192,000, rides extremely close to the ground, and despite its powerful V8, 454-horsepower engine, it only took a few inches of water to stop the car in its tracks.

Levitt realized a tow truck wouldn't arrive in time. So he opened the door, letting the dirty water flow in, and collected his bags from the trunk.

He took a cab to the island airport, found all flights had been cancelled, then headed to Pearson, where he caught "the last seat of the day" to Ottawa.

On Tuesday, Levitt won his motion in Ottawa, making the quick escape worthwhile.

"It's a good ending, except for my poor car," he said.

Three women who police say were held captive in a Cleveland home for about a decade have issued a video in which they thanked the public for the encouragement and financial support that are allowing them to restart their lives.

Amanda Berry, Gina DeJesus and Michelle Knight broke their public silence in the 3-minute, 30-second video posted Monday night on YouTube. They said the support and prayers of family, friends and the public are allowing them to rebuild their lives after what Berry called "this entire ordeal."

The women had gone missing separately between 2002 and 2004, when they were 14, 16, and 20 years old.

In the video, none of the women had any visible scars of the abuse they said they suffered at the hands of Ariel Castro, who has pleaded not guilty to a 329-count indict-

Castro, a 52-year-old former bus driver, fathered a 6-year-old daughter with Berry and is accused of starving and punching Knight, causing her to miscarry. He was arrested May 6, shortly after Berry broke through a door at the home and yelled to neighbours for help.

At least six people missing after 40-year-old roadway disappears under muddy water

Three people were pulled from a raging river but six others remained missing following a bridge collapse Tuesday in mountainous western China amid heavy flooding that has forced thousands to evacuate their homes.

The local government said in a statement posted to its official website that an earlier report that a pair of passenger buses had plunged into the river was incorrect.

Pipeline execs say no silver lining in Quebec rail disaster

Quoted

"This is a tragic event that shakes everybody and shakes all of us that are in the business."

Russ Girling, TransCanada Corp. CEO

Executives with major Canadian pipeline companies say they see no silver lining to the Lac-Mégantic train disaster.

There have been suggestions that transporting oil by pipeline may seem more palatable after several oil-laden rail cars exploded over the weekend, killing more than a dozen people and devastating the small Quebec town.

But TransCanada Corp. CEO Russ Girling said there's "no good news here for anybody" in the tragedy and the notion that the pipeline industry will somehow benefit from it "makes no sense."

While disasters ranging from Lac-Mégantic to the massive BP oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico three years ago jolt the public, Girling said companies such as TransCanada still have a responsibility to build new energy infrastructure.

"People continue to have needs for starting their vehicles every morning, cooking their food, heating their homes. We have an obligation to do that as safely as we can."

The president of Kinder Morgan Canada, which is planning to nearly triple the amount of crude shipped on its Trans Mountain line between Alberta and the B.C. Lower Mainland, said he too fails to see any upside for pipeline firms resulting from Lac-Mégantic.

"I think that the public is obviously very concerned about the broad safety net that is available for both rail and pipelines," he said.

"I think it's a question of all operators — whether it's pipe or rail or trucking for that matter — (to) continue to be very diligent and vigilant in their safety precautions."

Earlier, Girling said he's "extremely optimistic" the company's Energy East project — a proposal to ship up to 850,000 barrels a day of Western crude to eastern markets through an underused natural gas line — has enough customer support to go ahead.

WANT TO KNOW YOUR DEATHDAY?

Another day, another amazing scientific breakthrough.

This one, I have to admit, actually is amazing. And disturbing.

A team of scientists in the U.K. have come up with a blood test for infants that will predict how quickly they will age and how long they will live.

Talk about “born to die.”

These scientists have identified 22 metabolites — molecules linked to metabolism — that help govern a host of bodily mechanisms such as lung function, bone density, blood pressure, cholesterol levels, etc.

Putting a positive spin on it, the scientists believe that they will now be able to influence these metabolic factors and treat age-related diseases before they put us on the wrong side of the lawn.

But seriously, do you really want to know when it's over — as

JUST SAYIN'
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca

soon as it begins? Right now, Canadians can expect an average life expectancy of 81 years, which seems comfortably far off when you're three days old. But what if your metabolites predict a 50-year life span — or worse? It seems a bit unfair to expect someone to start working on a bucket list before he's out of short pants.

How long will it be before metabolite blood tests are routine? Together with genetic analysis, the fate of the child will be sealed before the first car ride home. Career, insurance coverage, diet, hobbies, whatever, will all be based on their metabolic or genetic impact — or both. “Epigenetics” is the means by which environmental factors switch certain genes on or off. So, conceivably, the state of your metabolites will help determine your genetic array and vice versa.

Together they take all the guesswork out of life. Maybe all the fun, too.

If you were still harbouring any notions of free will, it's time to put all that aside and start the grim dance of biological determinism.

It's hard enough bringing kids into the world. If you're lucky enough to give birth to a relatively robust being who will take care of you in your dotage, it's almost worth the investment, but if the poor little gaffer will expire before you're 64, what's the point?

Of course, it doesn't matter what I think or what you think. Medical science marches forward, regardless. Once the genie is out of the test tube, it's not about to allow itself to get stuffed back in.

Still, I'm glad I have no idea what my best-before date is. For all I know, I could be looking forward to a telegram from the Queen when I turn 100. She'll certainly still be around.

Or the wheels could fall off next Thursday. Ignorance is bliss.

Baby, it's cold in the ice cave

In the sweltering summer heat, New Yorkers are ready for the big chill — in midtown Manhattan.

The city's first ice bar is now open at the New York Hilton Midtown on Sixth Avenue. The $20 admission includes Eskimo-style gloves and a parka for the privilege of drinking cocktails in the freezing Minus5 Ice Bar.

The entire bar is made of ice. “The walls, everything,” manager Chris Eldridge said. “The chairs you're sitting on, the glass you're drinking out of, even the light above your head is made of ice.”

Promoters say it's all carved out of “100 per cent Canadian ice.”

The truth is, it's special, extra-clear “carvers” ice — some from Canada, the rest from Philadelphia, Las Vegas and Minneapolis.

The only concessions to warm comfort are some couches covered in deerskin. Drinks reflect the icy clarity: mostly vodka-based cocktails in custom-designed glasses made from artesian water.

Godzilla: a historical movie figure

IN FOCUS
Richard Crouse
scene@metronews.ca

For someone who grew up watching Godzilla stomp his way through the major cities of the world, the idea of a sea monster large enough to use a battleship as a baseball bat is very exciting. In Pacific Rim director Guillermo del Toro presents the biggest movie monsters seen since the Blue Oyster Cult sang, Oh no, there goes Tokyo, go go Godzilla!

Pacific Rim's monsters are direct descendants of the "kaiju" or strange beasts that became popular in the sci-fi films produced by the Japanese company Toho in the 1950s and '60s. Most famous is the king of all monsters, Godzilla, the giant lizard who wreaked havoc in 29 movies. Rounding out Toho's big five are a Divine Moth called Mothra and a trio of kaiju named King Ghidorah, Mechagodzilla, and Rodan.

The first Godzilla film came in 1954. The story of an ancient dinosaur-like colossus created by American nuclear weapons testing was inspired by a news story about the Lucky Dragon 5, a Japanese fishing boat contaminated after sailing too close to a U.S. nuclear test.

"Suitmation actor" Haruo Nakajima played the beast and could only walk 30 feet at a stretch in the 200-pound Godzilla suit. To create the monster's fearful roars, audio engineers threw reverb on the sound of a resin-coated leather glove rubbed on the strings of a double bass. Ten years after that movie, King Ghidorah, a fearsome alien dragon, was created as Godzilla's archenemy. He was equipped with nuclear fire breath, and in the 1964 film Ghidorah The Three Headed Monster, he devastates Japan until repelled by Godzilla, Rodan, and Mothra.

Rodan, the 1956 kaiju movie about mutant pterosaurs and prehistoric insects who terrorize humanity, has two significant firsts. It was the first Japanese monster movie to be filmed in colour, and, according to George Takei's autobiography, was his debut as a professional actor.

Director del Toro too busy to take in a movie

Blockbuster. Guillermo talks making Pacific Rim and making movies in Hollywood

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

Guillermo del Toro is first and foremost a movie buff, which has been causing him a distinct amount of unhappiness.

You see, del Toro has been so busy making movies — particularly his latest, the giant robots vs. giant monsters blockbuster Pacific Rim — that he hasn't had any time to actually watch other people's movies. Or at least that's the excuse he gives for not having seen Man of Steel or the first instalment of the Hobbit, which he was originally pegged to direct.

There's been a lot of criticism about the levels of carnage shown in Man of Steel. Your film also features a great deal of urban destruction. How do you keep from crossing the line from fun into too realistic?

Well, kaiju movies by definition bring a completely escapist fun in these type of fights. When you're a kid and you're watching Godzilla stomp a bunch of tanks or jets or cut through a city, the proportions of these things are so enormous that you cannot correlate them to anything real. What I do is I then bring in visually a very different sense of style from reality. I have these super-coloured lights illuminating the rain, so it looks like a living comic book or a living anime, you know? And the thing that I do very, very consciously is I vacated all the streets so they would be empty of people. So you're never thinking, "Oh, the kaiju just crushed 600 people." Because the streets are vacated and everybody's in a refuge, all they can destroy is buildings and vehicles when nobody's there.

Have you seen Man of Steel?

No, I haven't. I haven't seen many movies because I've been making one. The only two or three times I've gone to the movies in the last few years have been to movies that my daughters want to see. So I went to Les Misérables and I went to some animated movies — movies that I would not necessarily have gravitated towards. But that's being a parent, taking your daughters to see the Justin Bieber concert movie.

Does that mean you have to go see the One Direction movie later this summer?

No, no (laughs). Actually my daughters are not into that stuff.

Are you planning to do another non-English language film anytime soon, or do you live in Hollywood exclusively now?

Yeah, I would love to. I produce a lot of movies in Latin America and Spain and I'm producing a movie right now in Mexico. As a director I would love to do it, but I need to find a story that suits me. It's not like I have a drawer full of stories in Spanish and in English.

What determines if a story is better told in Spanish rather than English?

You cannot aspire to do a movie that is as quirky as Pan's Labyrinth in the Hollywood machinery. It would get tested and noted by executives to death. It would end up having a happy ending and all that bulls—, you know? And at the same time you cannot end up with a movie that is as spectacular and huge and magnificent in showmanship as Pacific Rim if you do it in Mexico or Spain. So depending on the scale of the story, depending on if you need to protect the production value and spectacle or if you need to protect the content and quirkiness of the story, you go from one (end of the) scale to another.

Kaiju & jaegers

Playing favourites

Pacific Rim introduces audiences to numerous "kaiju" — giant monsters from another dimension — and "jaegers" — the giant, piloted robots mankind creates to fight them off.

It's a movie clearly made, at least in part, with action figures in mind. So naturally director Guillermo del Toro has some favourites among the giant beasts and machines, right?

Among the jaegers and kaiju in the film, do you personally have a favourite?

"Yes," he readily admits. "My favourite jaeger is Cherno Alpha, because I think he is adorable. It's kind of this heavy, sort of clumsy, very old-fashioned, almost steampunky jaeger, and I like that. It looks like a giant iron boiler. And my favourite kaiju is Leatherback, the gorilla-esque one, because I fully identify with his beer belly."

Nick Lachey turned up the heat during a brief tour stop in New York on Monday to help launch a viral advertising campaign for Wendy's new Pretzel Burger.

The '90s heartthrob, back on tour with a reunited 98 Degrees, gave an intimate performance at a Midtown Wendy's, singing songs based on some tweets about the burger chain's latest creation. Yes, you read that correctly.

"It's not the easiest thing to write a song out of tweets," Lachey said about Monday night's performance. The song he created especially for this event? "Pretzel Buns I Am a Fan... Hashtag." That is literally what he sang. (The Word really wants to know what his paycheck was for this. Let's hope it wasn't just in Pretzel Burgers, even though he admitted that he's "a huge pretzel guy.")

Lachey was right back on the road after the event to prepare for the West Coast leg of the tour. Now 39, life on the road comes with different responsibilities for Lachey and his wife Vanessa, who are bringing their newborn son, Camden, along for the ride.

"It's different, but it's cool to come off stage and know your family is there and your son is sleeping in a crib on the bus," he said. "In a lot of ways it's a much cooler dynamic just having the opportunity to spend time with them and the opportunity to share those memories. It's a lot more meaningful than to be out on your own." METRO WITH REPORTING FROM CHRIS LONGO

The cast of Canada's Amazing Race. HANDOUT

From far and wide, the True North is Amazing TV

The Amazing Race.

The hugely popular reality TV show is coming north of the border with a Canadian edition

ON THE MOVE
Loren Christie
life@metronews.ca

Canada is finally getting its own version of The Amazing Race. Helming the show is host and Olympic athlete Jon Montgomery.

What made you want to be the host?

It intimidated me and scared me and I like that. As people we learn the most when we challenge ourselves, when we live outside our comfort zone.

What do you bring to the show?

Just an aspect of being myself. I think that's what was perhaps endearing at the 2010 Games. Just being someone who Canadians identified as being uniquely Canadian, being honest, being you, drinking beer. A big beer. If people identify me as an average Joe Canadian, then that's something I am really proud of. I set lofty goals for myself, but I am just an average guy getting it done.

Did you have any input into the roadblocks or detours?

They didn't pick my brain. I was simply tasked with being the host. But in the role I got to explain and do all the challenges. I demonstrate them. That's what will be different from Phil's (original series host Phil Keoghan) role and my role.

How long did the filming take? How many legs?

It was three weeks, every day. I believe 10 episodes in total. Each episode isn't just a day; they can span a couple of days. There were crazy hours just like in the U.S. one. People are fighting tooth and nail to get across this country.

What surprised you most about Canada?

Lots of places I didn't know about. We experienced a desert, mountains in places that I didn't expect to see them. At every stop there was some element of surprise. And I considered myself to be a pretty knowledgeable guy about our country.

Can you tell me one place the show went?

I can tell you we took a great many planes and automobiles to get from coast to coast to coast.

You said coast three times?

We do go north. If there is a Canadian out there wondering if they will see an aspect of their area of the country in this TV show, the answer is — yes!

How to click, submit and get picked: Get a handle on the online job hunt

E-mploy me. Creating an application package that conquers all of today's web-based roadblocks

GREAVES
TalentEgg.ca

Online job searches have become the easiest way for students and new grads to apply for jobs. This makes it critical to understand how online job searches actually work and how to ensure that you prepare your application successfully. How can you do this? Talk with the experts.

Resumé coach Pamela Paterson has 15 years of experience teaching about the art and science of creating effective resumé. She's the author of the new book Get the Job: Optimize Your Resumé for the Online Job Search and she was able to provide some egg-cellent online job searching expertise and tips.

What is the resumé writing system you refer to in your book?

The resumé writing system is a comprehensive approach to writing resúmes and getting

Take the road less travelled when typing up your resumé by doing away with the dull. ISTOCK them highly ranked in online job systems. It consists of six key steps:

1. Learning the system (beginning in the right way to achieve success).
2. Creating an effective layout and design (so your resumé is not rejected by online job systems).
3. Boosting your content (overcoming deficits and word choice problems).
4. Tailoring your resumé for online job systems (understanding how to become highly ranked — it's about more than just keywords).
5. Keeping your resumé on top of the competition (by doing what few people know how to do).

6. Testing and releasing your resumé to prospective employers.

You also discuss the other side — applicant tracking systems (ATS) — in your book. What are some effective ways to get through this system when applying for a job?

ATSs can search resúmes in almost any conceivable way — really, in any way the (employer) wants this system configured. Some people think that if they just include keywords from the job listing, their resumé will be filtered in a favourable way.

Job listing keywords help, but it is not the only strategy you need. ATSs may also search by other keywords, such as competitors' names. ATSs can search by job title, the date you last held the job title, the percentage that your resumé matches the job posting and even the method that you applied to the job, such as to the company directly or through a job board. There is a perception that job seekers who apply to the company directly are more interested in working for the company itself, and they may be higher ranked because of it.

How should job seekers tailor their resúmes?

Don't come across as "plain vanilla" like the thousands of other jobseekers.

You won't grab anybody's attention. One technique is to provide factual, objective information rather than subjective information that could be based on opinion.

For example, don't say you are "intelligent" if you can say you have a 4.0 GPA. Don't say you're "hard working" if you can include a snippet of a quote from a former manager who says you are a "major contributor on projects and a valued team member." Prospective employers like to see evidence on a resumé as opposed to opinion.

If you can provide statistics, even better. For example, rather than saying you designed a "large and complex" asset management system, you could say that you designed an asset management system that "managed the assets of 13,000 staff." Always be as factual as you can, and ences, contacts, etc.

Tabs help organize different sections and keep them all in one document.

Skills and experience

Place your volunteer experience and work experience in separate columns. Sort them chronologically with as much detail as you can remember. If you're just starting, copy and paste the relevant experience from existing resumé drafts. This database will be a great source for skills and experiences for future resumé and cover letter content.

Education

The education tab sorts out your schools, awards and related extra-curricular activities. Hopefully you will begin to see correlations between this information and the jobs you're applying for, and decide whether certain details will be added to each resumé.

References and contacts

Emails and business cards often pile up or get thrown away. Having each person's contact information in a spreadsheet can help you keep track of who they are, how you met them, what you discussed, the last time you contacted them and more.

Social media tools like LinkedIn keep professional connections updated, but it's always good to have a backup space with additional context.

Tabs in one spreadsheet are a great way to organize these contacts.

When temperatures rise, the idea of cooking loses its appeal. That's when salads like this Coastal Salad with Grapes and Shrimp come to the rescue.

This salad is rich but refreshing and the grapes are the key. Their juicy sweetness complement the flavour of the shrimp. Their crisp texture adds to the crunch of the celery and water chestnuts. And grapes have a tang that acts as a foil to the rich dressing.

Ingredients

- 1 lb large pink bay shrimp
- 1 cup seedless California grapes, quartered
- 1/2 cup chopped celery
- 1/2 cup chopped water chestnuts
- 2 each green onions, sliced, white and green parts kept separate
- 2 tbsp mayonnaise
- 2 tbsp dry sherry
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
- Few drops toasted sesame oil
- Pinch dry mustard
- 1 tbsp sesame seeds

This recipe serves four. NEWS CANADA

2. In a small pot, steam the mussels until they are opened, remove from shell and discard. Set aside.

3. Meanwhile, in a skillet, sauté garlic in 1 tablespoon olive oil until lightly yellow in colour. Add zucchini and sauté for 4 minutes, then season with salt and pepper to taste.

4. In a separate skillet, sauté scallops and shrimp in 1 tablespoon olive oil until lightly golden in colour. Season and set aside to cool down.

5. Once everything cools, combine all seafood with the pasta and zucchini. Toss to combine and add the remaining olive oil, lemon juice and parsley. Salt to taste. NEWS CANADA/BARILLA.CA

Man says ex-NFL star admitted to killing victim

A man linked to the murder case against former New England Patriots tight end Aaron Hernandez told police Hernandez admitted firing the fatal shots, and a vehicle wanted in a double killing in Boston a year before had been rented in Hernandez's name, according to documents filed Tuesday in Florida that provide the most damning evidence yet against the star athlete.

The documents say Hernandez associate Carlos Ortiz told Massachusetts investigators that another man, Ernest Wallace, said Hernandez admitted shooting semi-pro football player Odin Lloyd in an industrial park near Hernandez's home in North Attleborough. The documents were filed in court by the Miramar, Fla., police department to justify a search of Wallace's home in that city.

Memorial today at MTS Centre

A memorial service is planned for Wednesday afternoon at the MTS Centre for NHL agent Don Baizley.

The 71-year-old lawyer who died of cancer two weeks ago was well-liked in the hockey community and represented a long list of past and present stars in the NHL.

Players he represented include Teemu Selanne, Joe Sakic, Peter Forsberg, Paul Kariya and Theoren Fleury. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Turner bears brunt of hits on Alouettes

CFL. Defensive player of the week will sit out against Ticats with chest injury suffered in dominant performance

Blue Bombers defensive lineman Bryant Turner had a few frightening moments in Montreal last week when he paid the price for one of his hits and had to be rushed to hospital.

"It was pretty scary," he said Tuesday, after being named the CFL's defensive player of the week for his part in the 19-11 Bombers win that lifted the team to a 1-1 record.

Turner sacked Alouettes quarterback Anthony Calvillo three times and had two other tackles but after his last hit of the night, he found himself gasping for breath.

"It was hard to catch my breath and I don't know, that was a pretty important thing I needed right then."

He was put on oxygen and rushed to a Montreal hospital where he spent the night waiting for a heart specialist to look him over.

The story has a happy ending though.

"Everything checked out to be normal. Tests had to be run basically."

In the end, he was diagnosed with sprained ligaments in his chest and his sternoclavicular joint.

He will miss Saturday's game in Guelph against the Hamilton Tiger-Cats and late cut Marquis Frazier has been called back to take his place.

Edwards sidelined

The Bombers are also without one of their top receivers. Veteran Terrence Edwards is out for an indefinite period with a shoulder injury and is listed as week to week.

- "I'm going to guess it will be more than one week but I don't know," said Burke.

- Either Isaac Anderson or Doug Pierce are expected to replace Edwards.

"I do have some big shoes to fill with BT going down," Frazier said after practice Tuesday.

"It's terrible I get my shot off of injury but I'm going to try to make the most of it and do the best I can do."

Frazier was one of those players who almost made it after training camp, said coach Tim Burke.

"It's hard to replace Bryant but Marquis will do a good job," he said.

"He was one of the guys we had to send home because we didn't have enough roster spots but we liked him a lot."

The Bomber defence received most of the credit for the team's first win this season. Their offence seems to be still finding its feet.

"It's a lot on my shoulders but the coaches have confidence in me, they saw what I can do," Frazier said of the need to step up and maintain the high level of play the Winnipeg defence has shown.

Turner said he was excited to hear about the player-of-the-week honour, his first in his three years in the CFL.

"I'm hoping to be ready for Toronto, it's pretty much a day-to-day thing," he said.

Shero gets long-awaited call from HHOF

Winnipeg's Fred Shero in May 1978
THE CANADIAN PRESS FILE

Ray Shero was playing football on the beach with his family Tuesday when he got the long-awaited call.

The Pittsburgh Penguins general manager wondered if this would ever happen for his father, Fred. Winnipeg's Fred Shero died in 1990, but his two Stanley Cups as coach of the expansion-era Philadelphia Flyers and the innovations he made by hiring an assistant coach and instituting systems have led to him being named to the 2013 Hockey Hall of Fame class in the builder category.

"I never expected this to happen," Ray said. "I think it's a great step and an honour for my father, certainly."

Along with Shero, Scott Niedermayer and Chris Chelios, two men who were among the NHL's best defencemen for over a decade, made it in their first year of eligibility. They'll be inducted Nov. 11 with power forward Brendan Shanahan and successful Team Canada defenceman Geraldine Heaney.

"I was part of one era, I think Chris has probably been part of a few," Niedermayer joked. "The one thing that I do remember, playing against Chris, was he was one of the toughest guys to play against."

Niedermayer had 172 goals and 568 assists in 1,263 games and won four Stanley Cups, three with the New Jersey Devils and one with the Anaheim Ducks. He won the Norris Trophy winner as the league's top defenceman in 2003-04 and the Conn Smythe as playoff MVP with Anaheim in 2007.

Chelios clawed his way up the ranks of hockey. He had trouble making teams as a teenager and moved with his family from Chicago to San Diego before finally getting an opportunity with the Moose Jaw Canucks at age 17.

Chelios wound up playing 23 full seasons and parts of three more, winning the Norris Trophy three times.

"There was probably no reason in the world where I should've played in the NHL because of where I grew up," Chelios said. "Right place at the right time, I guess. It's a crazy journey, that's for sure."

The 2014 Chevy Silverado

Review. Chasing the Ford 150 means adding in more of everything that truckers want

wheelbasemedia.com

In pickup parlance the chase isn't just on, it never really stops. With the arrival of the 2014 Chevrolet Silverado, the pace is definitely quickening.

In 2012, 265,000 domestic and foreign-based 1500, 2500 and 3500-series pickups were sold in Canada and 40 per cent belonged to Ford. GM's Silverado/Sierra models finished solidly in second place, ahead of Chrysler's Ram and well ahead of the Toyota Tundra and Nissan Titan.

With the all-new Silverado 1500-series, Chevrolet appears to have done its homework and paid close attention to what buyers are looking for to haul and tow their stuff. There are more powerful engines as well as improvements and upgrades in nearly every other category you could imagine.

Behind the tailgate, the handy Corner Step bumper has recessed footholds that, combined with built-in handholds inside the box, make accessing the bed much easier.

The dashboard and control panel that houses the optional eight-inch touch screen are positioned in a tidy pod for easy viewing and all of the oversized knobs and switches are work-glove-friendly and clearly marked.

All body styles — regular,

<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Transmissions. Six-speed automatic.
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Base price (incl. destination) $27,150

Design

The new Silverado bears more than a passing resemblance to the outgoing model. In front, the twin stacked headlights remain, but the grille is now much more prominent and tougher looking. As well, the hood and fenders bulge out more aggressively than before.

Fuel economy

The transmission for all is a six-speed automatic. The result, at least for the more muscular V6, is a significant fuel economy improvement in city and highway driving (best guess of 12.0 l/100 km in the city and 7.8 on the highway, compared to 14.1/10.0 for the previous V6).

Direct injection

All three powerplants feature direct injection, which tailors the fuel load for the task at hand. They also have continuously variable valve timing (which allows in more fuel and air depending on the power needs) and cylinder deactivation that cuts off up to half the cylinders in light load and cruise situations.

extended Double Cab (now featuring front-hinged rear doors with outside handles) and four-door Crew Cab — are attached to a reworked frame with more high-strength steel, extra bracing for stiffness and improved body mounts that help isolate road noise and vibration.

The revised suspension places the wheels on each axle farther apart with a goal to improve overall ride and stability.

For 2014, Chevrolet has made a few changes to the Silverado's box size/cab combinations. Now you can order the Crew Cab with a longer 80-inch (200-centimetre) bed as well as the standard 68-inch (175-centimetre) version.

Perched between the frame rails is a choice of three new all-aluminum cam-in-block engines. The entry point is a 4.3-litre V6 that features the same displacement as the previous V6, but the output has significantly increased to 285 horsepower and 305 pound-feet of torque from 195/260. Optional is a 5.3-litre V8 with 355 horses and 383 pound-feet on tap, up from 315/335.

The High Country's plush interior and dash match anything that's on the market.

Later in the model year they'll be joined by an available 6.2-litre V8 rated at 420 horsepower and 440 pound-feet of torque, which shares its parts with the new Corvette sports car V8.

Chevrolet also likes to point out that it has managed to increase performance and reduce fuel consumption across the line without resorting to complex (and expensive) turbocharging. That's a direct shot at the Ford F-Series and its "Eco-boost" V6.

Of course you can order your Silverado as a stripped-down, rubber-matted V6 work rig with a $27,150 sticker, or head all the way up to the new and thoroughly tricked-out High Country 4x4 with a correspondingly high list price. It's a brand new trim level designed to keep well-to-do ranchers driving in the lap of luxury.

Whichever pickup matches your needs, know that Chevrolet has made the right changes for a more refined and fuel efficient Silverado to keep pace with Ford.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

If someone starts looking into your private affairs then you have every right to tell them to mind their own business. Don't be too forceful though or they may think you have something to hide and look even more.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

You are in a restless mood at the moment and it's unlikely you will be in the same place when the Sun goes down. For some reason, your surroundings no longer excite you.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

You will be in a charitable mood today and there is nothing wrong with that, but if you are going to give money away make sure it is to genuinely worthy causes.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

You may not be able to explain the way you feel but that's probably no bad thing. If you dwell too much on your emotions today, you won't get much work done. Make sure your head rules your heart.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

It seems you don't know whether to control your desires or indulge them. From past experience, you know that if you hold back, you are likely to regret it later on. Have fun.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

You may want to sit on the fence in some kind of domestic dispute but the planets won't let you. Like it or not, you have to choose sides and hope it all works out amicably in the end. Don't worry, it will.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

Take your pleasures where you find them and don't worry that some of those you live and work with don't seem able to get much joy out of life. You can't change their outlook.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Things are going so well for you at the moment that you may be a bit worried. Will fate turn round and slap you down? No. Though if you start thinking that way, you increase the chances of it occurring.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

Why are you letting minor matters assume major importance, at least in your mind? Whatever the reason you need to snap out of it — not later but right now.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

You may be the kind of person who prefers the tried and trusted. But the more you chop and change and move around today, the more fun you will have. If travelling on your own, you won't be alone for long.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

It's good that you are easygoing and it's good that you like to help people but don't forget that not everyone thinks and feels the same way. Be on your guard today as someone may try to cheat you.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

Don't bother asking friends for an opinion on what you are doing. It's unlikely they will be honest with you. The reason you are asking is that you have doubts yourself. SALLY BROMPTON
